NOTES ON AUTHORS

Alessandro Pizzorno is Professor Emeritus of the Department of Social and Political Sciences, European University Institute, Florence, Italy. He is one of the most distinguished social and political theorists in the world today, with his academic career extending to teaching and research positions at Harvard, Princeton, NYU, Oxford, Paris, Milan, and Urbino. His books include Political Sociology: Selected Readings (1971); The Resurgence of Class Conflict in Western Europe since 1968 (1979); Il velo della diversità: Studi su razionalità e riconoscimento (2007), and Comunità e razionalizzazione (2010), as well as a Festschrift in his honor entitled Identità, riconoscimento e scambio: Saggi in onore di Alessandro Pizzorno (2000). His publications also include numerous articles and book chapters in English, French, and Italian.

Harvie Ferguson is Professor of Sociology at the University of Glasgow. He has written extensively on the cultural, philosophical, and psychological aspects of the development of western modernity. He has published research on war experience in both a modern European and Japanese perspective. His most recent books are Phenomenological Sociology: Insight and Experience in Modern Society (London: Sage 2006) and Self-Identity and Everyday Life (London: Routledge 2009). He is currently writing a book on death.

François Foret is director of political research at the Institute of European Studies at the Université Libre de Bruxelles and associate professor at the department of political science. He is also spokesperson for the doctoral school of European studies for French-speaking Belgium. In the past, he held different teaching and research positions in France, the UK and Belgium. His work deals with European politics, policies and politics; the legitimization of the European Union; the symbolic dimensions of politics at the national and supranational levels; issues of collective identity and memory; interactions between politics and religion. Among his recent publications are: Légitimer l'Europe. Pouvoir et symbolique à l'ère de la gouvernance, Paris, Presses de Sciences Po, 2008; with Xabier Irçaina (eds) Politics of religion, religious politics: Western Europe at the crossroads, London, ECPR Series Routledge, 2011; (with V. Riva) “Religion between nation and Europe: The French and Belgian “no” to the Christian heritage of Europe”, West European Politics, July 2010, 33 (4).

Pak Nung Wong is a Research Assistant Professor at the Hong Kong Institute of Asia-Pacific Studies, Chinese University of Hong Kong. He obtained his M.Phil and D.Phil in social and cultural anthropology from the St. Antony’s College, University of Oxford. From 2002 to 2009, in collaboration with Philippine state agencies, the Roman Catholic Church and the local powers, he has done much field research in the Cagayan Valley (northern Philippines) handling on-the-ground issues that would interest governance and security practitioners. Apart from publishing a monograph on the post-colonial Philippine political development (VDM Verlag, 2009), he has also contributed to the following scholarly journals: Asia-Pacific Social Science Review (2010), Asian Journal of Political Science (2008), The Journal of Comparative Asian Development (2006 & 2009), Journal of International and Global Studies (2010), and Philippine Political Science Journal (2009). Since 2008, he has been learning the Thai language in preparation for conducting field research in Thailand. His forthcoming two research projects will deal with 1) the trans-local rice-trading networks and post-WWII state formation in Thailand with comparative reference to the Philippines and 2) with the transnational linkages and resources that have been connecting China, Hong Kong and Southeast Asia.
